An Amazing Album from An Amazing Harpist-Anne Roos' Latest Review

"Anne Roos is an amazing harpist, and this CD showcases her talents beautifully," says Catherine L. Tully about Anne Roos' performance on her most recent album release, A Light in the Forest. She adds, "Roos' harp music is effortless. Gliding and sliding over notes, she shows her skill time and again..."

Here is Ms. Tully's entire review, as it appears on the Celtic MP3s Music Magazine website:

"Anne Roos is an amazing harpist and this CD showcases her talents beautifully. A small musical group joins her on this effort, which highlights songs about woodland creatures such as fairies, nymphs and trolls. A 31 page hardcover book comes with the CD and it talks about various folk history and legends--a nice touch to a well thought out musical effort.

The group provides a lovely sound. CDs that are put forth only showcasing harp music can be nice, but it is equally wonderful to have some additional accompaniment; and it expands the amount of people that it will appeal to as well.

Roos' harp music is effortless. Gliding and sliding over notes, she shows her skill time and again, but this isn't "gaudy" music. It's simple, pretty fare. At 18 tracks, there are quite a few songs to enjoy here, each offering its own mood and feel. The gentleness of the harp is underscored in some pieces, the yearning almost palpable. If you love the instrument, you have to listen to this and see what can be done with the various arrangements. If you aren't a huge fan of the harp, there are still plenty of tracks here that you can enjoy."
